

New version of IPW TimeReg®

We are on the way to release a brand new version of IPW TimeReg®. In the new version, we have changed code and old components with new and more modern technology. In the new version, we have replaced all the old components that bind the current solution to Internet Explorer with the new ones which make the solution more browser and platform independent. It will be possible to run the new version of IPW TimeReg® in all the latest known browsers such as Google Chrome, Firefox, Safari and Microsoft new browser that is soon being released with Windows 10.

We are currently in the process of developing and testing of the brand new version and we expect to be ready for implementation in early 2016. In the new version you will find:

- New and modern design, providing bigger flexibility
- A time cost solution that can run on both mobile and desktop platforms
- Browser and platform independence
- New and improved reporting capabilities
- Better integration of Windows Office and other external systems
- A solution that scale better to the new and higher resolutions offered today

At the same time we keep the things that have made the solution popular among all our customers in many years:
